There are several famous palaces in Moscow. Many of them are regularly visited by tourists.

Petrovsky Palace is located on Leningradsky Prospect. Built in 1780 on the orders of Catherine the Great in the so called “Russian Neogothic Style”, the Palace was used by the Russian Monarchs as a place to stop at and rest on the way from St. Petersburg to Moscow. Today, Petrovsky Palace and Park are within the Moscow city limits. Part of the Petrovsky Park is occupied by the Dynamo Stadium.

Catherine’s Palace is located in the district of Lefortovo – which used to be the German District of Moscow or ‘Nemetskaya Sloboda’, where foreigners lived. When the palace was built in 1796, it was the biggest palace in Moscow. Catherine's son Pavel I didn't like this palace, and after the death of his mother turned it into the barracks for his soldiers. Since then, the palace has belonged to different military schools.

The Grand Kremlin Palace is located in the Moscow Kremlin, facing the Moskva River. The Palace was built in 1849 as the official residence of Russian Emperors in Moscow. It is a tall building but has only two floors. It is now the residence of the Russian President. Many official events are held there. Georgievsky Hall is the largest hall of the Grand Palace. When there are no official events, the Palace is open to tourists.

The Kremlin Palace of Congresses is the newest building in the Moscow Kremlin. It was built in 1961 on the initiative of Nikita Khrushchev to be used for the congresses of the Communist Party. In addition to its main official purpose, the Palace has always been used for concerts and theatrical productions. It served as the second stage of the Bolshoi Theatre. The main and biggest New Year's Party for children – 'Yolka' – has also been held here for years.

Sheremetev Palace, or Ostankino Palace, was built in the 18th century by Count Nikolai Sheremetev, one of the richest people of his time. Sheremetev loved arts and built his summer residence at Ostankino as a palace of arts which included a theatre and a library, as well as galleries of paintings and sculptures. Time: 25 minutes (22 points)

Read the text below and do the tasks after

A cuckoo clock

Tom was given a cuckoo clock on his birthday. Every morning at seven o'clock the little wooden bird popped out and sang seven "Cuckoos!" to let Tom know that it was time to wake up until Mummy called, "Breakfast ready!" Then he did all in a great hurry and left his house and waked to the bus stop at the corner of the street. But sometimes he was so late that he had to run to catch the school bus in time.

One day Tom woke as usual at seven o'clock, when the little wooden cuckoo called to him seven times. He yawned and stretched.

"I shan't get up until my cuckoo calls out eight times!" he told himself. At that moment the little doors opened above the clock face, and the little cuckoo popped out and sang eight "Cuckoos!".

"Eight o'clock," thought Tom. "Now I will get up!"

But cuckoo gave another call. This surprised and frightened Tom.

"It's nine o'clock!" he cried. "I am late for the bus!"

He jumped out of bed, out of pyjamas, put on his clothes, then rushed downstairs.

He ran down the road, turned the corner — and there was the bus, still waiting for him! He jumped into it, sat down heavily, blowing and puffing, and looked round. That was funny! There was no one else in the bus at all.

At that moment the bus driver appeared. "You're early today! It's only ten minutes past eight," the driver said.

"But my cuckoo clock called out nine times and it never makes a mistake!"

The bus driver laughed aloud. "That was a real cuckoo you heard!" he said. "I heard it myself this morning. Listen! If we keep quiet, we may hear it again." Away in the distance they heard "Cuckoo!" and then "Cuckoo!" again. There was a big brown bird on a branch of the tree near Tom's bedroom window.

The unusual summer trip.

One day, me and my family decided to take a summer trip to the sea. Dad and I were very excited, as we liked sea, water, and everything connected with it, especially diving. And so we went and arrived. Mom noticed that the wind was stronger than usual, which surprised her because she often lays down sunbathing when we go on trips like those. Then, one calm hour, the wind got so strong, that it managed to take down the umbrella and send it flying! I and Dad tried to catch it, but without any success. ^{in Kaliningrad} Then, a very kind family decided to help us and catch the umbrella too. With almost everyone in, we managed to finally catch the last umbrella and place it down. As we wasn't prepared, we decided to let me hold it until we go home, as I was very tired and couldn't go swim anymore. As I hold the umbrella, I ate and played with my young sister. She was 5. Since that day I always reminded Dad to take the additional equipment for the umbrella with us. It was incredibly fun and exhausting!

Moral of the story: Always be prepared for something unusual.
